HSC BRIEFING

3 June 1959

4 - Lim Yaw Hock
3 - UNMO

- I. Overwhelming victory of Communist-infiltrated People's Action party in 30 May Singapore election (43 of 51 assembly seats) foreshadows increasing problems for British and the West.
 - A. Landslide resulted largely from party's great appeal to pro-mainland Chinese nationalism and from hopeless split of moderate parties.
 - B. Constitution creating new State of Singapore promulgated yesterday, and government expected to be formed tomorrow.
- II. Communist activities and influence likely to increase under new government.
 - A. People's party has already persuaded British to release eight influential pro-Commie leaders of the party from jail, giving additional skilled leadership to already strong extremist elements in party.
 1. Latter comprise possibly 50 percent of party's active workers.
 - B. Doubtful if so-called moderate leaders can prevent large-scale Communist infiltration of government.
 - C. Questionable how effectively anti-subversive laws and safeguards in Constitution will work under new government.
 1. Large-scale anti-subversive sweeps in 1956-57 probably main factor keeping Communists under control; new government will almost certainly not use laws in same stringent manner.

1. However, Lee is notorious opportunist who may prove to have neither desire nor influence to control strong extremist elements in his party.
